The shadow of a great predecessor could be used to advantage if it is chosen as a trick or as a tactic, that can be discarded once it has brought you power or authority. Napoleon III used the name and legend of his illustrious grand-uncle Napoleon Bonaparte to help him become the first President and then Emperor of France. In Sub-continental politics, Indira Gandhi and Benazir Bhutto used the names and prestige of their fathers to get the position of Prime Minister in India and Pakistan respectively. In Balochistan, sons and off-shoots of many important political social leaders are taking advantage of the names and social or political prestige of their fathers or fore-fathers to claim respectability in Baloch Society.

BALOCHI:

6. Translate the following into Balochi:

> The Baloch came into Balochistan in three major groups. The first wave settled in Seistan and were called Naroi, followed by Brahui who settled in Turan which is now-a-days called Jhalawan. The last was of Rind. Some say Rind is a Balochi word 'Rand' or 'Randi' meaning the last; the tribe therefore derived its name from the above mentioned word. The Brahui and Baloch lived side by side in Seistan, were still live many Brahui tribes. The late comers penetrated into Sind and the Punjab. The Baloch migration into Sind was in two waves: from Baloachistan and from the Punjab.
